PERFECT CONFIDENCE
Traverse City People Have Good Reason For Complete Reliance.
Do you know how—
To find quick relief from backache,
To correct distressing urinary ills,
To surely cure sick kidneys?
Just one way—your neighbors know—
Have used Doan's Kidney Pills.
Have proved their worth in many tests.
Here's Traverse City testimony:
Mrs. G. Wikel, 303 S. Elmwood Ave., Traverse City, Mich., says: "Kidney complaint clung to me for a long time and made my life miserable. My limbs and joints were sore and I had all the aches and pains that generally accompany a bad case of kidney complaint. Finally after trying several prescriptions and remedies without being helped to any extent, I commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from S. E. Walt & Sons drug store. They benefited me at once and before long effected a complete cure. I know from actual experience that Doan's Kidney Pills are just as represented."

The Relief Proved Permanent.
On August 6, 1909, Mrs. Wikel was interviewed and added to the above: "I have had no occasion to take a kidney remedy since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me. You are at liberty to continue the publication of the testimonial I have preciously given in their favor."

THE STORY BRIEFLY

Louise Dornay, operator of a smart gown shop, finds herself unable to secure further credit and material just when she has some wealthy prospective customers in view. With the help of Willard Dempster, who loves her, and his pals, broke but willing, she is able to outwit mean old Mr. Finklebaum and make a favorable impression on the Smyths "from Oklahoma" and spelled with a y. Ward and Wesley, the pals, also make an impression on the two Smyth daughters, with the prospect of wedding bells in the near future. The plotting and struggles to get the fashion show ready in time to satisfy the bill collectors, Mr. Finklebaum, and the Smyths, calls for able assistance from Mrs. Monahan, the loyal fitter of Louise's establishment, and from Maizie Lou, a colored maid whose weakness is "makin' up rhymes, yas suh." Ward and Wesley are even pressed in to service and corsets to act as models for the creations which are to impress the Smyths. After the Smyth girls decide to take both the creations and the models, and after Mr. Finklebaum finds out that Mr. Smyth is not as sleepy as he generally seems, and after Willard decides that Louise's third finger needs additional decoration in the form of some sort of ring, the curtain falls on a very pleasant comedy—with fashions enough to please the eye of any interested spectator.

ATTRACTIVE ROOMS

Last Friday was judgment day for the home room contest in which every class in both the upper and lower classes participated in preparation for this event each class being especially interested concerning its own room, nevertheless showed keen co-operation with the other classes, and each student was interested in the decorating of the school as a whole. This good fellowship was prevalent because each student was anxious for welfare of the school in its efforts to preserve its motto, "Northport Leads The North".

The winners of the contest were announced at the F. R. A. Fair Friday evening. The ninth grade received first prize; the seventh grade received second prize, and the Junior class received third prize. These rooms were all very attractive and therefore difficult to judge.

In the lower grades, the sixth grade won first prize, the first grade won second prize, and the third and fourth grades tied for third prize.

Effort is being made to keep these rooms on a high level of appearance throughout the remainder of the year.

WINTER SPORTS PROGRAM

We are willing this on Wednesday with the thermometer around 82, although our subject has to do with ice and snow. That these two will play a greater part in Michigan's future is evident by the trend the last few years by many localities, promoting winter sports to draw outsiders in and thus make a more year-around community income. These events have become so prominent as to seem that a state-wide winter sports promotion should be undertaken by the Resort Associations which have so successfully advanced Michigan as a summer play ground. Our West Michigan Resort Ass'n is joining with the East Michigan Ass'n in a first general meeting to discuss the winter sports subject. The meeting to be held at Lansing, in the Olds Hotel, Nov. 10. Anyone interested in the subject is asked to attend and aid in the discussion. Could Michigan attract winter fun-lovers as she does which followed.

Two guest numbers greatly enjoyed Mrs. Elvesta Thomas Leslie very impressively described politics among the women of Turkey. The program closed with a piano solo by Miss Arlene Punter, which was also very much appreciated.

Two very interesting subjects were dealt with Mrs. Dale Punter very ably handled one on "World Peace". In a discussion of women in "United States Politics" Mrs. Alice Scott brought out some very interesting facts relating to the political status of women in this country. She ended her discourse by a discussion of the three amendments to the state constitution, and the one referendum on which the public will vote Nov. 8. Everyone voted this a very worthwhile meeting. Refreshments were served by the hostess and committee.

The Northport High School Athletic Association held its first meeting at the school late last week. The Association has complete charge of all athletics, their finance, and their policies, and consists of representatives from the village, the faculty and the student body. The body this year consists of, Chairman, Arthur L. Richter, Coach, H. I. Kens, Business Manager, K. on the wire.
"A most unexpected thing has happened," she faltered. "I can't see you for two weeks. I—I may have to be away. I—I'll call you when I am free again."

There was real concern in Henry Wiltshire's tone. "Can I be of service to you?" he asked.

"In this—or in this case?" Isabel stammered. "There's nothing you can do. There are others involved besides myself."

When Isabel hung up she felt that Henry Wiltshire might conjecture a number of frightful things. Why she had sounded positively melodramatic falling in love at forty-five was more demoralizing by far than falling in love at sixteen.

Isabel Bingham had known Henry Wiltshire only two months. The company of which he was president was establishing a branch in her city, and he found it necessary to be there almost constantly until the new offices were under way.

Henry Wiltshire's courtship, beginning at once, had combined all the fire of youth and all the determination of middle age. Isabel from the first was swept off her feet. Recently, however, she had been a bit disturbed by his failure to propose.

The first days of Peggy's visit were so full that Isabel found little time to grieve over the absence of Wiltshire. Strangely, Isabel was rather enjoying her new duties.

At the close of a day during which Isabel had had the baby all to herself, while Peggy went to a bridge luncheon—a terrible possibility occurred to her. Suppose, after her marriage to Henry Wiltshire, she should not like the baby! It was all very well to choose between a man and a baby when one loved the man and had never seen the baby, but it was quite a different matter when one knew the baby to be the most adorable darling in the world.

"What a charming picture you and the youngster make!" said a pleasant voice behind her.

Isabel turned, and with starry eyes and crimson cheeks faced Henry Wiltshire. Oh, her hair, her dress, her unpowdered nose! She must say something, but her tongue was dry and her mind a blank.

"Call it curiosity, interest, solicitude, whatever you will," Henry Wiltshire continued, "but I couldn't stay away another day."

Isabel heard the garden gate open and close with a bang. Peggy was running up the path.

"Oh, mother," the girl cried, "it was terrible to leave you with the baby all day."

numerous inquiries relative to hunting on the right-of-way.

A year ago the Department received an opinion from the attorney's office relative to this question. The opinion said that "no person has a right to shoot from the highway any more than he would have a right on the land, as the only rights the public have is an easement to pass over."

If the land adjoining the roadway "comes under the Horton Law that is where land is occupied as a farm or a portion of it has been set aside as a game preserve," it is an offence to hunt on the roadway without permission. Otherwise, the action against the hunter would be for trespass, the opinion said. Shooting from the highway gives the hunter no more right than going on the land and shooting.

Invocation on Prescription

The science of medicine had its origin in the very depths of ignorance and superstition and even today it has not entirely shaken off all the hereditary beliefs and symbols which have adhered to it down through the ages. For example, the capital R with the line across its foot, to be found on every prescription, is thought by most physicians to be an abbreviation of the Latin word "Recipe," but Dr. Howard W. Haggard, associate professor of applied physiology at Yale university, has traced it back to an invocation to the god Jupiter, a prayer for his aid to make the treatment effective. In many old medical manuscripts all of the R's occurring in the text are crossed.

Billy had a new suit which he wanted to wear on Sunday for the first time. He begged to go to church instead of staying with the other small children.

"Although with misgivings, mother said she could, but that he would have to be very quiet. For a time, all went well, but during the prayer, every one was startled to hear an excited voice: 'Oh, mother, there's another pocket!'

Lights Out

At church, little Jane listened to a sermon on "Let your light shine." The only part she remembered was the text, but she didn't understand what it meant until her mother said: "It means being good, obedient, and cheerful."

In the afternoon there was trouble in the nursery and Jane excused herself for being naughty by saying: "I've blown myself out."

Time seems to always be against me. I might have been able to get a copy of the tintype if I had had eight weeks notice--I'd still have been pushing the deadline before I went to work on it. The letters and the tintype that I mentioned are not mine. They belong to Sylvia. I've had the box of letters that Aunt Bertha saved and have been going through them to abstract anything of genealogical interest. I've had them so long that I'll bet Sylvia has forgotten about them (although "elephant mind" hasn't forgotten much).

In pictures I got from Mama is a snapshot of a long, white-cloth-covered table set out in the yard. Behind the table stands a sizable group of people. At the right and a little away from the table sits a woman. On the back of the pic. Aunt Ella has written that Oscar says this is the whole Dam family--or wording to that effect. I've thought that the seated woman was Aunt Ella; but, if the senior Mrs. Dame was alive, it probably is she. I don't know offhand where I have that box of Aunt Ella's photos. One would think that I wouldn't have had things mislaid when we had just three rooms. Now, with four there isn't any improvement in being able to locate "saved things."

When Sylvia and I were at Treva's and we drove up to Northport, we stopped at a museum that stands on the east side of the road (somewhere on the peninsula). I took a picture of it. Runs in my mind that it is a brick schoolhouse converted to a museum. On display were copies of old photos with stories about the area. There was information about the first Dames on the peninsula. I didn't copy it because I figured that I could get it all out of a history book at the public library at Fort Wayne. I would, also, look there for an atlas of maps for Northport and Cathead Point. If I were researching the Dame family I'd look for a collection of newspapers. Since there was no issue from Aunt Ella I've not done any research along that line.

On the trip out there we went to the cemetery. I copied dates from Oscar, Ella and Vivian's tombstones. I had not found dates in Mama's things. I've always hoped to get back to the St. Joseph County Clerk's office to see if Ella married in Mottville. I think she probably married sometime around 1906--don't ask why I think that. Sylvia thinks not; that it was later than that.

I've not written down the information Ora remembers from conversations with Uncle Oscar (and what Daddy knew) regarding the lighthouses he tended and the time periods for his service in each. When we were at the Mariner's Museum in North Carolina many years ago, we saw the lens from Beaver Island (if I recall correctly). It had great chips out of some sections, but the rainbow colors from the sun shining on it were brilliant. I supposed, nostalgically, that Uncle Oscar had polished it.

I'd heard the Milliken name spoken of, but didn't know why it connected to Uncle Oscar. The obituary explains it. I had imagined that Vivian was adopted from the Milliken family; however, there is no basis for that conjecture. There seems, in my mind, to have been a handsome young man named Milliken--but maybe not.

When I was a kid, I showed off a lot to get attention. One time, at the lighthouse, Aunt Ella wanted Grace McCormick to sing for us. Grace acted shy and wouldn't do it. Either I offered, OR Aunt Ella turned to me and said she would give me the red vase that set on the mantle of the fireplace if I sang. With the vase were two red glass candlesticks--each for two candles. The red vase was mine. It broke sometime in the 1950's. I have at least one of the candlesticks from Mama's things that she got from Northport. The red paint is chipped and maybe the edge of the glass. I haven't seen them for a long time.

Everything that was painted in the lighthouse was painted light gray. Aunt Ella didn't have anything excess in the line of furniture or ornaments. I remember that on the right and beside the steps down into the kitchen hung a wooden-framed mirror. Under the mirror was a tin combcase. We washed there and everyone used the comb. I was too young to remember about the quarters other than that.

I slept alone the last trip Daddy made in the Model-T. The lapping of the waves against the shore put me to sleep, I recall the sound. Grace McCormick had taken me around the grounds and I was tired so I dropped off to sleep quickly and they let me sleep late. Grace took me down past the foghorn building and back along the sandy shore where the women had setup a place to do the laundry. They built a fire under a big iron kettle and the clothes were hung along the beach. We stayed out of the water there because there was an undertow and we needed to have it explained only once to obey orders. But we waded in the shallow water out in front of the lighthouse. We lounged around on the stone steps that led down to the shoreline.

During the stay that summer, we shopped once in Traverse City and went to the museum park. I had money enough to buy my first pair of earrings. They were a simple dull-blue button smaller than a dime. I was wearing them when we left Northport to come back to Mottville. Uncle Oscar and Daddy had gone out in the woods beside the lighthouse, near the huge boulder that had split in half, and dug cedar trees for planting along the south side of the yard at home. They were bundled and laid in the back seat leaving room enough for me to sit. I recall leaning over against them and their fragrance and sleeping during the night driving. We never found the one earring and I didn't get another pair until after Ora and I were married.

Grand Traverse Lighthouse

In January 1939, Oscar and Ella (Fuller) Dame were spending the winter in Florida. She wrote from St. Petersburg, Florida, to her sister, Bertha Lowell (Bristol, IN) that Oscar's brother, Marston Dame, had been killed in a car accident. She included the newspaper obituary along with a tintype of a man. In May 1939, Ella wrote to Bertha from Northport, Michigan, that Oscar had word that Oscar Wilbur died in Chicago. She mentioned that Oscar had been named after him; and wrote that they will go to the funeral in Charlivoix.

The obituary: Gilman M. Dame, 72, pioneer Leelanau County orchardist, close friend of two Michigan governors, and former chairman of the Republican state central committee, died in Munson hospital Monday morning shortly before noon as the result of injuries sustained Thursday when his car collided during a blinding snowstorm with a Manistee and North Eastern Rail Road train at Suttons Bay.

A friend of former governors Fred Green and Chase S. Osborn, Mr. Dame served the state and his community in many ways during his long residence here. He was at one time chairman of the state food and drug commission. Prominent in Republican party work since early manhood, Mr. Dame was chairman of the Leelanau County Republican party at the time of his death.

Throughout Northwest Michigan, Mr. Dame was known chiefly as a cherry producer. Interested in the cherry growing industry for the past three decades, his orchard was the first established in this district and his Montmorency orchard is believed to be the largest of its type in the world.

Among his other activities were the managership of the Hasserot properties, the Cherry Home farm and presidency of the Northport Canning Company and the Leelanau Coal Company.

He is survived by his widow, Ida, two daughters, Mrs. Basil Milliken of Downers Grove, Ill., and Mrs. Conrad Stuker of Oak Park, Ill.; one son, Gilman Dame, Jr., of Northport; two brothers, Isa and Oscar, both of Northport; two sisters, Mrs. William Voice of Northport and Mrs. Charles Authier of Detroit, and three grandchildren. One daughter, Mrs. Clark H. Day of Flint and a brother, Seba Dame, preceded him in death.

The body was taken to the Martinson & Son Funeral Home at Suttons Bay, and lay in state at the Northport M. E. Church from 9 A.M. until 2 P.M. on Thursday. Funeral services were conducted Thursday at 2:00 o'clock at the Northport Methodist Church. Rev. Wilson Tennant officiated and interment was made in the family lot in Northport cemetery.
